Innovations in Global Medical and Health Education

January 18, 2015

Do doctors know best? Who will take care of the world?

Kelley M. Skeff, MD, PhD
Stanford University
Conflict of Interest Disclosure

Consultant to:
Wolters Kluwer Health

Kelley M. Skeff, MD, PhD
Goals

Do doctors know best?
Who will take care of the world?

_Evolution of medical education_

- Historical Evolution of Medical Education
- Competencies
- Schemes for considering medical care

Kelley M. Skeff
Stanford Faculty Development Center
Historical Evolution of Medical Education

- Emphasis on Science
- Emphasis on Patient-Physician Communication
- Emphasis on Professionalism
  - Science
  - Individual Patient Care
  - Health Care Delivery for Populations
  - Quality Improvement

Kelley M. Skeff
Stanford Faculty Development Center
Evolution of Trainee Competencies

- Patient Care
- Medical knowledge
- Interpersonal Skills and Communication
- Professionalism
- Practice-Based Learning and Improvement
- System Based Care

ACGME
Copyrighted material has been removed from this presentation
Evolution of medical education

– Historical Evolution of Medical Education
– Competencies
– Schemes for considering medical care

Kelley M. Skeff
Stanford Faculty Development Center
How can doctors contribute their best in providing care for the world?

Kelley M. Skeff
Stanford Faculty Development Center
Enhanced Roles of Physicians - Using Competencies to:

Expand Collaborative Care
- with Patients
- with Health Care Delivery Systems
- with Society

Kelley M. Skeff
Stanford Faculty Development Center